Appeal from the United States District Court for the Southern District of Mississippi
USDC No. 3:07-CV-653

Before SMITH, STEWART, and SOUTHWICK, Circuit Judges.

PER CURIAM:*

In this diversity tort case, Margaret S. Patton appeals the district court's grant of summary judgment to the defendant, the ambulance service that responded to her late husband's heart attack. We AFFIRM.

Patton alleged negligence in American Medical Response's ("AMR") response to the call for service. Specifically, she claimed there had been a failure properly to equip its ambulances and train its employees. Summary judgment for AMR was entered because Patton had failed to offer expert testimony to establish these matters: (1) the applicable standard of care; (2) that AMR breached that standard of care; and (3) that AMR's conduct was the proximate cause of Mr. Patton's death.

* Pursuant to 5TH CIR. R. 47.5, the court has determined that this opinion should not be published and is not precedent except under the limited circumstances set forth in 5TH CIR. R. 47.5.4.

As the district court explained in its well-reasoned opinion, Mississippi law requires the plaintiff in a medical malpractice action to establish these three elements "by expert testimony." Brown v. Baptist Mem'l Hosp.-DeSoto, Inc., 806 So. 2d 1131, 1134 (Miss. 2002). On appeal, Patton argues that the standard of care is not at issue, because the case turns only on contested facts about what the AMR employees actually did at the scene, and what supplies were available on their ambulance. Accordingly, she claims, this case is not appropriately considered a medical malpractice case at all, and no expert is required.

We find no support for this theory in the Mississippi case law. There may be factual disagreements between the eyewitnesses, but this does not eliminate the need for an expert witness to testify concerning the standard of care by which AMR and its employees were bound to act, or that any failure to abide by that standard caused Mr. Patton's death.

The facts also do not allow Patton to avoid the need for an expert on the basis of the "layman's exception" for extremely obvious medical errors. The proper diagnosis and response to a cardiac arrest suffered by a patient with a complex medical history is not within the "obvious" knowledge of lay people. See Sheffield v. Goodwin, 740 So. 2d 854, 856 (Miss. 1999).

The judgment of the district court is AFFIRMED.
